

BITTER DEBATE IN THE SENATE

Another Sensational Clash Over Primary Elec- tion Matter.

PROTEST IS ADOPTED

Baraboo Man Named for Board of Control in E. R. Peth- erick's Place.

PASS VOTING MACHINE BILL

Madison, May 11.—The closing day of the session as far as business is concerned was the most sensational of the session and was marked with a bitter debate between the stalwart members of the senate and the friends of the primary election bill. The debate arose over a resolution of protest against Governor La Follette's message of yesterday in which several of the senators objected to statements in the message as to the method of fighting the Stevens bill.

The debate over the protest was the most sensational that ever occurred in the Wisconsin legislature. During the debate Senator Miller in speaking against the resolution and on the primary election issue said "The issue will go to another field now and this time it will be hoped not before a subsidized senate."

Later Mr. Miller apologized for this remark. The resolution was adopted 13 to 8.

Herman Gotophorst was today appointed to succeed E. R. Petherick as a member of the state board of control. The appointment was confirmed in the senate.

Today was the last working day of the legislature. The Burns caucus bill failed for lack of a quorum in the assembly.

The uniform system of book-keeping and the bill abolishing the state land office were passed. The senate passed the Hall voting machine bill which will become a law.

JONES SCORES THE GOVERNOR

Senator's Scathing Remarks Created a Distinct Sensation.

Madison, May 11.—In the senate last night "Long Jones", leader of the stalwarts bitterly scored the governor for the manner in which the latter in his veto criticised the opponents of a radical primary election bill. The senator asked in ironical tones when the governor when secured a patent on all the honesty and integrity in the state, and by what authority he assumed the right to attempt to correct and reform public officers who were just as honest and sincere in their opinions as he was. The senator's scathing remarks created a distinct sensation.

The Overbeck bill levying a charge of ten cents a ton on all ice cut by foreign corporations for shipment outside the state was passed by a vote of 17 to 9. Mr. Roehr made a long speech in favor of the bill. He said that the state's income from this source if the bill passed would be about $150,000 a year.

The nine votes against the passage of the bill were cast by Messrs. Bissell, Gaveny, Hatton, Jones, McDonough, O'Neil, Reynolds, Riordan and Whitehead.

The McGilvray anti-trust bill was killed. This was the measure that the assembly for a time the other day refused to return to the senate. The judiciary committee amendment modifying the provisions of the bill was rejected by a vote of 15 to 10. The bill was killed by a viva voce vote.

VETO MESSAGE IS BITTER.

LaFollette Roasts Hagemeyer Bill and the Stalwarts.

Madison, Wis., May 11.—"A mockery of platform pledges and judicious legislation alike" is the way Governor La Follette sums up his opinion of the Hagemeyer primary election bill, which he vetoed yesterday.

The governor, in his veto, did not confine himself to a recital of the defects of the bill under immediate consideration. He gave a brief history of the origin and development of the demand for primary election reform in this state; cited the platform pledge of the republican party at the last election and recalled the governor's recommendation on the subject in his message to the legislature at the opening of the present session. The governor described the character and methods of opposition to primary election reform, concluding this section with the following statement:

He is Unable to Approve.
"With the defeat of the original bill the friends of primary election offered to pass the measure, subject to the approval of the people. This the opposition refused. A further concession was then offered applying the primary election to municipal, county and legislative offices. This the opposition refused. A last effort was then made to submit the limited bill to a vote of the people. This the opposition rejected. And after having refused to pass the bill promised, and having refused to let the people pass upon it, a mockery of platform pledges and judicious legislation alike is offered in the form of a bill which I am unable to approve."

Obligation Forbids Approval

The reasons why he cannot approve the bill the governor explains in detail, beginning with the "blanket" reason that he cannot divest himself of the binding character of his official obligation to all the people of the state, which "forbids sharing in the responsibility of giving them a law which violates that obligation, and is manifestly so as to bring reproach upon the principle, even if it were at all possible to interpret or enforce it."

The governor then gives specific minor reason why he cannot sign the bill, calling attention to its inherent and manifold defectiveness, and concluding by showing that its referendum provision is so carelessly drawn that the whole measure would be unconstitutional, even if ratified by the popular vote at the April election.

Of the methods used to defeat the original bill in the legislature the governor says:

Scores the Stalwarts.

"An array of federal officeholders, joining with certain corporation agents and the representatives of the machine in the regular legislative lobby, moved upon the capitol, took possession of its corridors, intruded into the legislative halls, followed members to their hotels, tempted many with alluring forms of vice, and in some instances brought them to the capital in a state of intoxication to vote against the bill. This sets forth in part the character of the opposition, but omits to take account of some of the means used, to prevent the passage of the measure."

BATTLE FOR THE CONTROL OF THE NORTHERN PACIFIC FIERCE AS EVER

General Prosperity of the Country is Not One Whiff Less Than It Was a Week Ago—Stocks Have Lost No Value

New York, May 11.—The general prosperity of the country is not one whit less today than it was a week ago, and stocks have not lost one penny's worth of their intrinsic value. Wall street feels that its only danger lies in a repetition of the mad manipulation that developed in the struggle to control Northern Pacific, and the bankers will use their best endeavors to prevent that. But if the corner in Northern Pacific has been called off the battle for control of the road is believed to be on as fierce as ever. It is stated on authority that J. Pierpont Morgan has given orders to his brokers to trace every share of Northern Pacific that passes through their hands and ascertain into just whose possession it is delivered.

In other words, it is believed that the Morgan-Hill party does not intend to surrender one share of its holdings to the Harrington-Kuhn-Loeb faction or to give that interest any advantage it does not now possess through the settlement of this tangled situation.

Who controls the road now is a matter of doubt. The real victors in the struggle may be disclosed in this settlement, and it may not be known until the annual meeting of the road next fall which party to the strife has gained the ascendancy. But any rate the corner is called off and if it had not been half of the street would have been ruined.

AFTON MAKING BIG FIGHT FOR ROAD

They Threaten to Refuse the Right of Way Unless the Line Goes Through That Town.

The town boards of La Prairie and Rock have been holding a meeting today with the promoters of the Afton, Delavan Lake and Janesville electric road. Supervisor Humphrey from the town of Rock is making a strong fight to get the road to go to Afton. The controversy has about resolved itself into a proposition; that unless they go to Afton they cannot use any of the highway for road purposes. The route suggested by Mr. Humphrey would entail the building of three bridges across Rock river and would make the road several miles longer than the present survey. A change of this kind means a good many thousand dollars to the promoters of the enterprise.

A delegation of citizens from Afton also appeared at the meeting and advanced their claims to the right to have the road run through that town.

The promoters of the road say the plan is not feasible and do not wish to go to Afton. They claim that there is no merit in the plan and do not like the measures adopted by those people to hold up their franchise.

The surveyors have now reached Rockton and will have completed the survey to Rockford in a few days. As soon as the franchise is secured through these towns they will be in a position to establish a grade and go on with the work.

THE STARS FURNISH HEAT TO THE EARTH

Question Which Has Long Puzzled Scientists Has Finally Been Solved by Prof. Nichols.

Williams Bay, Wis., May 11.—Do the stars, millions of miles away, send to the earth's surface any heat along with their rays of light? This is a question which scientists have long been unable to answer. It is answered now and affirmatively. The heat from those far off bodies has not only been measured but detected. It has been measured by one of the most delicate and sensitive instruments ever made by man—an instrument capable of measuring the heat of a candle a mile away.

The credit for solving the question which has long puzzled astronomers and for constructing the instrument sensitive enough for this purpose belongs to Professor E. F. Nichols of Dartmouth college. The work was, however, performed at the Yerkes observatory at the university of Chicago. Professor Nichols has spent two of his summer vacations at the Yerkes observatory, having all the advantages of the unique equipment of that institution at his disposal, with those of accomplishing one of the most distinct advances in modern astronomical science.

Producers of Cane Sugar.

The largest producers of cane sugar last year were Java, 670,000 tons; Cuba, 500,000 tons; Louisiana, 340,000, and Hawaii, 230,000. Here are 1,740,000 tons out of the world's total of 2,850,000 of cane sugar. But the production of beet sugar by four European countries far exceeds this. The figures are: Germany, 1,950,000 tons; France, 1,125,000; Austria-Hungary, 1,075,000; Russia, 890,000, or 5,040,000 for the four out of the world's total of 5,950,000.

FIVE WOMEN LOSE LIVES IN A PANIC

Passenger Steamer Takes Fire and is Consumed on Lake Superior.

MEN SAVE THEMSELVES

The Bon Voyage While Burn- ing Was Run on to Superior Beach.

TWO SAILORS ARE DROWNED

Houghton, Mich., May 11.—The passenger steamer Bon Voyage caught fire in Lake Superior last night and was beached near the Portage ship canal.

A telephone message from Red Ridge, the village nearest the spot where the steamer was put on shore, says that five passengers, all women, were drowned in getting from the boat to the shore. The rest of the passengers, all of them men, escaped in safety to the beach.

Five Passengers Lost.

Four of the passengers lost belonged to the Altman family of Duluth. There were two women of that name, one 60 years old and the other 30, and two girls 5 and 12 years old respectively. A third child was saved, by clinging to a fender till the arrival of rescuers, though her face and hands were frightfully blistered. The other who was lost was Mrs. H. B. Cowan, a maid on the boat.

Fire Spread Rapidly.

The circumstances which resulted in the death of the women while every man on board was saved will be the subject of a rigid examination.

The fire broke out around the steamer's smokestack when she was some distance from land. The crew of the steamer manned the fire apparatus at the first alarm and had a stream from a hose on the blaze in a short time. The fire spread rapidly in the dry wood around the stack and the people on board held out as well as they could but were finally unable to stand the smoke and flame and dropped into the water one by one. Some had life preservers but there was not much chance of anyone living in the cold water had not help been close at hand.

Steamer Struck Bottom.

The steamer struck bottom nearly a mile from land, owing to the shoal water. Observers from a distance failed to see the life boats lowered but they must have been used to aid the passengers and crew who escaped.

The steamer was soon afterward seen to be wrapped in fire from bow to stern. She will probably be a total loss.

The mayor says there was a demand among church people and similar classes for an old-time New England observance of the Sabbath. "I find that the majority prefer a liberal policy," said the mayor, "and so long as I continue mayor the city will be conducted on a tolerant plan, as it was during the exposition, when hundreds of thousands of guests were here, and came to no harm."

Just Between Ourselves

"Janesville is moving forward with a vengeance," said a gentleman a day or so ago. "The town is finally waking up from the Rip Van Winkle sleep in which it has been indulging for so many years and is getting rapidly abreast of the most progressive cities in the country."

Now be it known that when this gentleman made this very true remark his mental vision was filled with alluring pictures of new city halls, post offices, library buildings, tobacco warehouses, railroad depots, electric railways, canning factories, handsome new residences, improved streets, extensive sewerage systems and the substantial and very genuine business boom which makes the immediate future of our fair city look very bright indeed.

The remark, or some similar one, is heard very frequently in these days of business prosperity and to the ears of many people it has a melodious sound because it is true in an ethical as well as in a commercial sense. Janesville is waking up. Our eyes are being opened to many things to which we have been blind for years. We are learning to value something besides the husks of life, the strenuous, soul wearying struggle to keep our bodies out of the graves into which eventually they must go, despite our efforts. We are coming to recognize and appreciate some of the quiet, potent influences which have, almost without our knowledge, been tending to give us a broader outlook.

As an eye opener—the word is used advisedly though it may cause a smile—nothing has done more than the parents' receptions which have been held at the public schools. They have done more to make parents realize the wonderful way in which the children of today are being educated than all the lectures that could be delivered on the subject. If they have done nothing beyond arousing an interest in the schools, no matter how feeble, they have done wonders.

It has always been a mystery to me, not to be understood, how parents can be content to intrust their children to an educational system about which they know absolutely nothing. Their blind confidence in this matter is sadly at variance with the general skepticism which forms a large percentage of human nature. Most parents have no realization of what the schools of today are doing for their children. The receptions given on Arbor day were a revelation and a surprise to the majority of those who attended them. In the first place they met the teacher, and talked over the work which their children were doing, saw that work as it is done each week of the year, good, bad and indifferent, compared it with the work that other children in the same grades are doing and received, probably for the first time, some idea of the immense advantages placed within reach of the children and the use which the children are making of these opportunities.

Before you went to the reception, and if you were privileged to go and did not miss an opportunity that would have been a liberal education for you, you had no idea of the work which your child is doing each day. The drawings with which the school room walls are adorned were a revelation to you whose lessons in drawing were confined to tracing designs in a drawing book, using a ruler and compass and perhaps tissue paper. You saw for the first time how much more attractive the flowering plants and beautiful pictures on the walls make the school rooms and how much broader and more beautiful is the education of mind and soul which the present school system aims to give your child than was the bare, uninteresting book knowledge with which you were fed. If your child is blessed with a truly modern teacher whose work is glorified by love, your heart was gladdened by meeting her and a bond of sympathy which will accomplish much good was cemented between you.

Even to people who have no strong personal interest in the schools, the method of work is most interesting and the reception was a most attractive place. The art work, in pencil, pen and ink, and water colors appeals most strongly to the eye, but the other school work holds much that is interesting to the ones who had time to give it a little attention. Some of the work is really remarkable, judged from a most impartial standpoint.

The parents' reception should become an annual fixture in school work. The attendance this year was large and the interest was great but many people were not reached and in those who were an appetite for more experiences of the same kind was aroused. The children were greatly interested in preparing for the work and will be stimulated by them to better work. This year not even the teachers knew why the work of the pupils was being saved except that it was Supt. Mayne's order. If the reception and exhibition is made annual and the child knows that his work is to be shown to the public, his zeal in school work will be aided by that spirit of pride which is altogether praiseworthy and helpful. The parents' reception is entitled to become a school custom. It has a large mission and one that can be accomplished so well in no other way. L. F. B.

John Yahn is building one on Fifth avenue and Glen street.

Contractors with large jobs on hand are looking for men to do the work. It is a common thing for a contractor when he is asked when he will begin a job of work to reply "As soon as I can get the men."

John P. Challen, who has the contract for remodeling the Jackman block intends to start on the work the first of the next week, and is looking for men.

No man that is a carpenter, brick layer or mason need be idle this summer, as there will be plenty of steady work for all. Some of the contractors say they will be obliged to go out of the city to get men to complete their contracts.

Evidently this is to be Janesville's busy year.

PUPILS SURPRISE THEIR TEACHER

Janet B. Day Entertained by the Members of Her Physical Culture Class Last Night.

When Janet B. Day accepted an invitation for supper last evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Charlton, 107 South High street, she had no idea that Mrs. Charlton was simply aiding the members of the physical culture class who appeared in the exhibition at the high school in a scheme to surprise their instructor. In fact Mrs. Day received no hint of the pleasure in store for her until she arrived at Mrs. Charlton's home and found some of her physical culture people already there and others dropping in by twos and threes. Then, as she herself expressed it, she began to see that it was a gathering of the class.

Little Miss Lottie Charlton received the guests very prettily at the door and at seven o'clock the company was summoned to the dining room where a feast for the eye as well as for the palate awaited the ladies. Red is the color of the physical culture class and by a happy fortune red is the color which predominates in the decoration of Mrs. Charlton's pleasant dining room. The long dining table, which extended the entire length of the room, was radiant in festal decorations of the brilliant and beautiful color.

In the center was a great bunch of red carnations, the fragrant blossoms nodding until they met their artificial counterparts embroidered in the centerpiece on which they stood. Carnations were at each plate and the fancy boxes, in which the salted peanuts were served, gave additional dashes of color. In effective contrast were the ropes of smilax which made a delicate tracery on the snowy linen.

A pleasant surprise awaited the company at the table. As each guest lifted her napkin, she beheld the well known features of Mrs. Day smiling up at her from the front cover of the menu card, the portrait being surrounded by a design of carnations. On the reverse cover was a dainty drawing done in pen and ink, the latter the work of Miss Pearl Willey, one of the members of the class. On the inside of the folded card was the class motto "Get health—no labor, pains nor exercise that can gain it must be grudged." Opposite the motto was the following

Menu:
Cream Potatoes Veal Loaf
Lemon Jelly
Olives Rolls Salted Peanuts
Coffee
Shrimp Salad Wafers
Ice Cream
Angel Food Devil Food

The banquet was very prettily served by the Misses Ida Green, Ethel Fifield, Margary Nicholson and Hattie Richards under the direction of Mrs. Charlton and Mrs. Arthur Wheeler.

After the excellent banquet the guests were given a picture problem to solve. On the walls of the parlors were fifty mounted pictures, illustrative of the title of a book. Each person was given a blank card containing fifty numbers and was expected to write the names of the books opposite the numbers corresponding to those on the pictures. The pictures were very clever and were beautifully mounted, this part of the evening's entertainment being furnished by Miss Florence Rider. The contest was very interesting and everyone entered into it heartily during the hour allowed. To the satisfaction and pleasure of the company, the prize a silver spoon, was awarded to Mrs. Day, her list bearing forty three correct titles. Miss Willey came second with thirty-nine.

The participants in the banquet were limited to the members of the class who took part in the public drill. The entire affair was planned and carried out by the members of the class in honor of their teacher and they are indebted to Mrs. Charlton's hospitality for such splendid and pleasant surroundings in which to entertain. It was an occasion of pure pleasure and the details of arrangement were well taken care of by Misses Gertrude Stoddard, Pearl Willey and Florence Rider.

Relative Importance of Letters.
To those who have never considered the subject, it might appear that each letter is of equal importance in the formation of words, but the relative proportions required in the English language are those: a, 85; b, 16; c, 30; d, 44; e, 120; f, 26; g, 17; h, 64; i, 80; j, 4; k, 8; l, 40; m, 30; n, 90; o, 80; p, 17; q, 5; r, 62; s, 80; t, 90; u, 84; v, 12; w, 20; x, 4; y, 20; z, 2. It is this knowledge of how frequently one letter is used compared with others that enables cryptogram readers to unravel so many mysteries.—Youth's Companion.

Real Estate and Building News

The following are but a few of the numerous improvements which will take place in this city this season. There are good prospects for several other buildings. At least three tobacco dealers are looking for locations and it is almost certain that two of them will build this season. The St. Paul railroad company are talking of a new round house to be located somewhere in the city limits.

The plans for the new $75,000 post office will be here by July 1st, and work will undoubtedly commence this season.

The new city hall to cost $40,000 and the new public library will be erected this season.

Dr. E. F. Woods will remodel the All Souls church building at once and will make it into two commodious flats, with offices on the lower floor.

Blair & Summers have started on the carpenter work of the cannery factory and say they will be able to complete the work in contract time. Contractor Peters has the mason work well under way and will have everything ready in time for the carpenters.

The $40,000 St. Mary's church is progressing finely and the walls begin to show what the finished building will be like.

Men are busily engaged in clearing away the old buildings at the corner of Pleasant and River streets where the Janesville Machine company will erect a $20,000 warehouse. George Leverenz, who drew the plans, has been engaged to oversee the work. The help will be furnished by the company.

The twenty room addition to the Grand Hotel is about completed and will make that hotel one of the most commodious in this part of the state.

James Shearer has a large force of men employed on the new Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul freight depot on North Main street and will have it ready for the company within the required time. The foundations for the building are nearly completed.

The St. Paul company will undoubtedly build their new passenger station this season, which will mean employment for more hands.

Archie Reid and family have just moved into their handsome new residence which cost in the neighborhood of $35,000. It is undoubtedly the handsomest and most convenient home in the city.

David Stewart has the contract for building F. H. Jackman's new $10,000 residence at the corner of South Second and Sinclair streets. He will also build F. H. Baack's $3,000 home on Court street.

I. F. Wortendyke's home is all enclosed and will be completed in a short time. Ground has been broken on the lot adjoining it of George F. Kimball's home, which will cost about $5,000.

W. F. Palmer will erect a new home on Court street, and H. S. McGiffin one on Sinclair street in the same neighborhood.

William McVicar is erecting a nice house on South Main street and

THOUGHTFULNESS.

"Johnnie, did you mail the letter?"
"No, I never thought a thing about it till just as I came in the gate."

"Well you are the most thoughtless boy I ever knew, that letter" was very important. What am I going to do to you, to make you more thoughtful?" The mother looked across the table, perplexed and annoyed at the carelessness of the boy that had so many good points, and yet whose weakness of memory was a constant trial.

There are lots of Johnnies and plenty of Marys in the world, troubled with the same weakness. Boys and girls, men and women, whose lives would be up to the average, if they were not so thoughtless.

It may not be considered a sin, and yet in many cases it causes suffering and sorrow. The habit, well practiced, is demoralizing in the extreme and a menace to success.

The mother enters the room just vacated by the daughter who has just gone out in party attire to attend the opera. The floor and the chairs are covered with articles of wearing apparel, and a glance through the bureau drawers finds them in the same state of confusion.

Thoughtless of everything but the pleasure of the hour, and careless to a degree that promises plenty of trouble in the years to come.

Follow the girl out into life, where she occupies the position of the presiding genius in the home, and which for five years she has attempted to govern.

The husband comes in to the six o'clock dinner with a friend, an unexpected company. The wife throws aside the novel, and in a deshabille attire, greets him with the statement that if she thought of company, she would have been more presentable, forgetting the fact that the every day husband is entitled to more consideration than the casual caller, and that there was a time not so long ago, when her best gown and her brightest smile were none too good for the man whose heart she had won.

He was just as tender of her welfare today, but her lack of thoughtful appreciation was painfully apparent and the seeds of thoughtlessness gave promise of a harvest of indifference and carelessness, all too common in the home.

The father watches the boy of whom he hopes so much, with a feeling of grave solicitude, when he discovers that he is thoughtless and careless of the little things that mean so much in the character foundation of life.

He has talked to him, time and again, in a fatherly way, about the importance of good associations, clean habits, and pure morals.

The boy possesses good impulses, and a genial disposition, but he doesn't do much important thinking, and unconsciously he drifts out into surroundings that are not helpful. The procession is a little swift and he is obliged to swear a little, and drink a little, and smoke a good deal, in order to keep up.

By the time he is ready for life, the opportunities, that he has heard so much about, are lacking. Other young men seem to find them, but they don't come to him.

He has forgotten the fact that so many young men fail to realize, that the eyes of the business world are on them from boyhood. Not eyes of solicitude, but cool, calculating eyes, that take in at a glance, and seal with a quick judgment, the character and worth of the boy in business life.

That every time he goes down the street with associates that are a little fast, he closes a door of opportunity.

That every time he lights a cigarette and puffs it in the face of a business man, another opportunity has gone up in smoke.

That every time he enters a saloon he adds another figure to the score against him, and all because he did not think of consequences.

The young men who stand around idle, in the busy thoroughfares of life, because no man has hired them, are responsible for their condition, as a rule, to their thoughtlessness, which has deprived them of the necessary equipment.

It is gratifying to know that while so much misfortune and sorrow are caused by thoughtlessness, that the picture has a brighter side, and that over against the dark background of every day experience, stands out in strong relief, another class of homes that are full of sunshine, and another class of lives that bless humanity with thoughtful consideration, and kindly solicitude.

Here is a home where the husband and father is constantly thinking and planning for the welfare and happiness of the inmates. He has gone in and out of the home for twenty years, and the girl wife that shared it with him so long ago, and contributes so much of love and happiness, is beginning to show the marks that time never fails to trace, but she was never quite so handsome or half so good, and when he surprises her with a kiss, and tells her so, the same happy flush paints her cheek, that he first discovered when they swung on the gate in the moonlight.

In this home the wife and mother is the shrine of eternal happiness. Love and family devotion, is spontaneous. The mother thinks and plans for the children, and the children fill their cup of happiness with thoughtful words and deeds. The whole atmosphere of the home is wholesome and helpful, and its influence reaches out to humanity, with magnetic touch.

Thoughtfulness, like every other grace of the human heart, is God-like and Divinely inspired. Like every other grace, it is capable of culture and rare development.

There are two methods of thinking that are as distinctive in action as results. One of them turns every energy of the mind in toward self, and all the thinking and planning is prompted by selfish interests.

The other forgets self, and reaches out in every direction like rays of light, touches humanity in ways that are helpful, because pure and holy thought inspired the touch.

The world grows better under the influence of thoughtful effort, and the millennium approaches as people forget self and think of humanity as a common brotherhood.

SPECULATION.

The wild spirit of speculation that has been in the air for the last few weeks, has reached a climax, and fortunes of all dimensions, have melted away like the morning dew.

It is well that conditions have occurred to call a halt, for the fever of excitement was spreading rapidly and all parts of the country were being involved. The losses are largely confined to the great money centers, and while a few men have become suddenly rich, a very large majority of the investors have suffered serious loss.

Thousands of young men, mortgaged their salaries for months ahead, and many small dealers invested everything they possess and all they could borrow, in a mad desire to get rich quick.

It is fortunate for the country that the speculative class are largely in the minority, and that stock, gambling is considered too risky to tempt the majority.

The country will recover from the present shock without serious disturbance, and the tide of legitimate prosperity will continue, in spite of speculation.

It will be a relief to the people throughout the state to know that the legislature has finished its work. The session has been unusually long and exciting, but on the whole results will be satisfactory to the people at large. But little in the way of freak legislation is allowed to pass, and the primary law, which has consumed so much time, is better understood than ever before, and is in shape to be intelligently handled at the next session.

The flunk in stocks caused by dealings in Northern Pacific stocks, calls to mind the panic of '73 caused by trading in the same stocks. The country is so prosperous now that a flurry on the floor of any Board of Trade cannot affect the actual value of a single dollar's worth of property.

The imperialism McKinley is representing on his trip, is the imperialism of the whole American people, which is more profound and powerful than that of any crowned head of Europe.

Our increase of $8,000,000 per month in exports is the only thing that can distract John Bull's attention from that terrible budget.

The fact that all Europe is combining against American trade, is an indication of the importance of our competition.

Oom Paul finds his greatest pleasure in smoking his pipe and reading the British Budget.

The Hon. Tom Johnson believes, in three cent fares in cities where he does not own the franchises.

Favorite Flowers of Our People.

A table, published in the annual report of the department of agriculture, is enlightening as to the amount money the people of the United States spent in purchasing favorite flowers at retail in 1899—roses, $6,000,000; carnations, $4,000,000; violets, $750,000; chrysanthemums, $500,000; miscellaneous, including lilies, $1,250,000. These vast sums found their way into the pockets of nearly 100,000 producers and dealers.

Where the British Taxes Go.

One or two interesting items of expenditure are shown in the accounts of the civil contingencies fund for 1899-1900, which shows a balance of £92,421 18s, says a London newspaper. One of the main items of expenditure incurred by the admiralty lay in conveying the remains of the late Lord Herschell from New York to England at a cost of £1,941 17s 6d. Under the head of "Repayable Miscellaneous Advances" we find that the stamp duties in respect to letters patent of ennoblement came to £1,679 12s 6d. For instance, the stamp duty in creating Baronet a viscount cost £200 12s, while the barony of Sir Julian Pauncefote caused a disbursement of £150 12s. The grant of augmentation of arms to Lord Kitchener is placed at £10 only.

Homes for Unmarried Women.

Sweden and Norway both boast several homes for unmarried women. One of these was endowed more than 200 years ago by a man who left the bulk of his fortune to his spinster descendants. The home is managed by salaried trustees, and the unmarried woman who can prove kinship to the founder is entitled to a home there.

Which Married Mother.

Jack's father and mother were having a very heated discussion at the table one day. They entirely forgot him, and, as the argument waxed fiercer, he looked from one to the other with real concern on his chubby face. Presently, during a lull, he cleared the air by asking, pointedly: "Papa, did you marry mamma, or did mamma marry you?"

WHEN you are in France, if you have only a little time left after "doing" Paris, spend that time in Normandy. If you have only one day, give it to Rouen, a town probably as old as the Druid Cromlechs of the Isle of Jersey, and its buildings and the ways of its people seem as old as the Druids too.

In the vast cathedral, built two centuries before the discovery of America, is the tomb of Richard the Lion Hearted of England. The great town clock "grosse horloge," set upon an arch over the street, dates from 1389. But most of all a woman will care to search out with loving pains the places where Joan of Arc, the holy maid of Domremy, walked while on this earth, the grim, gray tower where she was imprisoned, the sorrowful path she trod from the tower to the stake.

Rouen is full of traces of gentle, saintly Jeanne Darc to this day. The very air seems vibrant with memories of her. The principal street is named for her, "Jeanne Darc." It was spelled as I have written it, with no apostrophe between the D and the a. Rouen still recalls that the maid's family name was plain peasant Darc till the French government, long after her martyrdom, enabled it by decreeing that the aristocratic "de" should be placed before it. Jeanne Darc had no blue blooded ancestry, therefore was snuffed out by no fine lady traditions when she entered on her mission. Had she been "in society" France might have been an English possession to this day.

Yet another street is called "Rue de la Pucelle d'Orleans," and there is, too, the "Place de la Pucelle d'Orleans." Her memory is honored by an inscription in the market place. In these ancient French towns the market place is an important spot. It was a lovely spring day when I went through the public market of Rouen. Old ennobling walls, built like almost everything else in this part of the world when time was long, stood all about. The stalls were bright with flowers and fragrant with the odors of delicious northern French strawberries. New grown peas, like polished round green pearls, were bursting from their fat pods. Clean, white capped peasant women cried their wares musically—periwinkles, tender green radishes and succulent rhubarb stalks.

Past them all, stalls, women and radishes, through the market house I went and on to the spot where one of the world's most awful tragedies was enacted—the burning at the stake by decree of church and state of a virgin martyr who had delivered her country from a foreign power. The very spot where the fires were kindled is known and marked. A stone of the pavement outside the old market covers the place. Years after her death, when the martyr had become a saint in the minds of the French nation, old people yet living who remembered the death scene and the day pointed out the spot to those who wished to make record of it. The maid was taken to the market place to be burned that the populace might see and take warning.

Joan of Arc owed her death to science, strictly. In writing of the extraordinary career of the maid, the scientist biographer of today tells you that at the age of 13 she "believed herself subject to supernatural visitations," "imagined" that she heard voices calling to her and giving her direction. Further, she had heard a tradition that a virgin was to deliver France from the English invader, and having imagined she heard the voices and saw the visions it was very easy for her, being already slightly touched in the head, to go in a trifle stronger and again "imagine" herself to be that virgin.

Thus says science today. But it was exactly the "science" of 1431, that of the University of France, the very forefront of the learning of the time, which first demanded the trial of Joan of Arc on the charge of sorcery. Today science would eat its own head before it would admit there was any such thing as sorcery. Science changes its front.

Having defeated the English and seen Charles VII crowned, the maid heard no more voices. Her work was done. Then she begged to go back to grooming and feeding her horses at the country inn. But no! The French king and his nobles would not hear of it. They begged, they commanded, her to remain with them, leading them to conquest. She yielded. That was the girl and the woman of it, and then her sorrows began. Not until she had been arrested and put on trial for sorcery at the demand of the most advanced scientists of the day did she hear any more unearthly voices. There in the grim, gray tower, terrifying beyond description to a country girl of 18, her heavenly voices and visions returned to her and kept her from going mad. For months common humanity argued pro and con with the college professors and advanced scientists. Finally the advanced scientists had their way, and their decision that the maid was guilty of practicing diabolical arts and should be subjected to punishment by fire was affirmed officially.

Speedily the punishment was executed, speedily the maid passed from the grim tower into the dear sunshine for the last time. Down the street of Jeanne Darc, which was not Jeanne Darc then, and across to the open square she walked, ranks of pitiless men at her heels, in front and all around her, only one kindly face in the whole sea of humanity surging through that market place. She had been put to the rack to force her to confess the black art, had weakened for a little, and said she did not believe her voices and visions were of God. Then she took it all back and declared they were of God and then—the pile of wood, the tender white body chained to the stake, shrinking beneath the cruel fires. In that last moment celestial visions floated before her in glorious beauty. She testified that the voices said to her:

"Daughter of God, go out this day shalt thou be with me in paradise."

At least, she "imagined" so.

Then while her earth body went up in smoke and flame this great spirit, herald and prophet of the woman that is to be bent back invisible to God. Hundreds of feet press daily the paving stone which marks the place where she was burned; every year hundreds of American women stand beside it with hearts full of pity and reverence and the number of pilgrims ever increases. The inscription, wearing dim beneath the many feet, tells us she was martyred May 30, 1431, on what, by a coincidence, is now the American Memorial day—the day for placing flowers and evergreens upon the graves of the beloved dead. The maid's ashes were sprinkled upon the waters of the Seine.

Today the gentle maid is St. Joan, canonized, and the patron of France. Today foremost among those who shudder at the deed of horror wrought in Rouen, that fair May 30, are the world's most advanced scientists. So it goes.

In the Place de la Pucelle d'Orleans is a statue of Jeanne by no means worthy of Rouen or of her. The inscription thereon says of her that she was "in sex a woman, in arms a man, in fortitude a hero." Well might it say so.

Peacefully flows on still that Seine which nearly five centuries ago bore the ashes of the maid to the ocean, but all the atmosphere of old Rouen thrills with her spirit still. It seems indeed as if

In her ashes live their wonted fires.

She "imagined" she was divinely called to do great works. She did them. That is the cold, hard fact. Pity some of us today could not "imagine" ourselves in like manner called to do worthy deeds.

A Very Remarkable Remedy.

"It is with a good deal of pleasure and satisfaction that I recommend Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy," says druggist A. W. Sawtelle, of Hartford, Conn. "A lady customer, seeing the remedy exposed for sale on my show case, said to me: 'I really believe that medicine saved my life the past summer at the shore,' and she became so enthusiastic over its merits that I at once made up my mind to recommend it in the future. Recently a gentleman came into my store so overcome with colic pains that he sank at once to the floor. I gave him a dose of this remedy which helped him. I repeated the dose and in fifteen minutes he left my store smilingly informing me that he felt as well as ever." Sold by Peoples' Drug Store and King's Pharmacy.

MYSTERIOUS EXIT OF NELSON C. DUDLEY

HIS WIFE ASSERTS THAT HE HAS DESERTED HER.

Left Home Last Saturday, and Has Not Been Seen or Heard From Since—Took Along Certain Wedding Presents—Was Hard Pressed by Local Creditors.

The whereabouts of Nelson C. Dudley of 103 Lin street, who left his home and wife last Saturday night are still unknown to his wife and friends.

Dudley was employed as engineer by the Rock River Cotton company and worked up to last Saturday. In the evening he went home to supper and after supper sent his wife down town for some groceries and other goods. During her absence he packed up a number of wedding presents and then skipped out.

His wife on her return found the house deserted and a number of the things missing. She instituted a search and has not been able to find him, and since that time has not been able to locate him. She appeared to the police to see if they could not help her get back the missing goods but was told that on account of their being wedding presents which had been given to her husband they could not recover them.

Dudley and his wife were married about a year ago and resided on Linn street in a cosily furnished house. He had steady employment as an engineer at the Rock River Cotton company's plant at a good salary. All went well with them for a while and then Dudley began to get behind in his payments for groceries and his household furniture. He also became very abusive to his wife and several times used her roughly.

Mrs. Dudley and all she could to help the household along and went to work in a tobacco warehouse last winter to earn money to help pay off the debts, but the harder she worked the less inclination he showed to help her pay the outstanding indebtedness.

Last Saturday night a furniture dealer appeared at just about supper time and demanded his pay and asked to see Dudley. He had his wife tell the furniture man that he was not at home.

His wife is satisfied that he intended to desert her and that his absence can be accounted for in this way. His creditors were pressing him and he took this means to get away from them. His wife thinks he does not intend to return and has sold some of the furniture back to the dealers and has received a few dollars more than what they were owing the dealer for them. She is a hard working young woman and had a good place with the Lewis Knitting Co. before she married Dudley. She has the sympathy and support of all her neighbors who are acquainted with the facts in the case.

WILSON DRAWS A CROWD AT GRAND

Al. H. Wilson, with his heart thrilling melodious voice, his romantic, dashing manner, and his quaint humor, made a decided hit at the matinee performance of the "Watch on the Rhine," at the Myers Grand, this afternoon. Judging by the delight of the audience and the real merit of the production tonight's performance will be greeted by a packed house.

The play is novelty in itself and much of its charm is due to the beautiful songs which Mr. Wilson sings, to the clever comedy work of Fanny Bloodgood and to the really wonderful acting of the charming little girl actress, Cora Quinton.

A Janesville Company, Managed by Janesville Men Which Pays a Dividend of 25 per Cent. to Stock Holders.

A great many people are not aware that Janesville has an insurance company organized here and managed by Janesville men which bids fair to be in a short time one of the staunchest concerns in the city. This company was organized by Janesville men four years ago. It has paid all losses and expenses to date and today has a surplus on hand of $6,500 with no liabilities. It does its business on the same plan as that of the large New England Mutuals and promises to be as popular as these have been. Writing insurance at the same rates as the stock companies it declares a dividend at the end of the year which for the past twelve months has been 25 per cent. This company is managed by a board of five directors as follows: C. D. Stevens, W. G. Palmer, A. E. Birmingham, A. E. Matheson and H. J. Cunningham, the latter of whom is giving all of his time to the business of the company, having his office in the Hayes block. Over one third of the business of the company is done here in Janesville which speaks well for home patronage and from the volume of business coming from all over its territory it would seem that others appreciate its merit also.

Tribute of Man of Letters.

In a recent address on Nineteenth century literature in London, Ambassador Choate said that he would give them the tribute of one of the greatest American men of letters, his most illustrious predecessor, James Russell Lowell, to the wonderful "Wizard of the North." Lowell's end was very near. He and all his friends knew well that for him the silver cord of life would soon be loosed, when Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes went out to pay him a last visit at his house in Elmwood. The two had always been like brothers, calling each other by their first names. As the doctor entered his room, he said, in his usual light and breezy way: "Well, James, how are you today?" And, Lowell, on his couch, clasping a little book in his hands, looked up with a bright smile and answered: "Wendell, I don't know how I am, and I don't care. I'm reading 'Rob Roy.'"—New York Post.

Newspapers a Beacon Light in Russia. The Russian press is under an unbearable yoke. But what it loses in the way of liberty is compensated in the field of expansion. The number of provincial papers has increased tenfold, compared to what it was during the most liberal period of Alexander II's reign. Consequently, a provincial Russian nowadays is far from what he used to be. He feels his connection with the rest of the world, and he has gained in initiative as well as in criticism. Moreover, the provincial press, profiting by the stupidity of the local censors, sometimes brings to light facts of the greatest importance which would never come out through the metropolitan press.

PASSENGER STATION STILL IN EMBRYO

Nothing new has developed lately in the location of the new St. Paul passenger station. The petition for the vacation of thirty feet of High street which was sent to Chicago some time ago for the sanction of the officers of the road has not been sent back and until it returns no definite move can be made at this end of the line.

It was the intention of the attorneys for the road in this city to present the petition to the council next Monday night but as it has not yet been returned nothing can be done before the next regular meeting.

Orders were received this morning by Agent Johnson to have the lumber and other obstructions removed from the main and freight house tracks between Jackson and Academy at once. This would seem to indicate that the company intended to have the land in shape so that there would be no delay in starting the work when the petition is signed and returned.

The company regrets that there is so much delay in getting this work under way as they are anxious to get the station completed this season.

far enough out so as to see past the corner. Below the level at which I lay a broad jumble of irregular roof tops.

A spot of bright color upon one of the nearer roofs attracted my attention.

"That janitor's wife may notify somebody," I thought, and I dragged myself carefully back into the room. Upon looking around the small apartment I was disagreeably surprised to find how few articles therein were capable of being used for signaling purposes. However, I gathered up what there were and, resuming my somewhat perilous position half way out of the open window, commenced to utilize them to the best possible advantage. Shouting at the top of my by no means weak lungs, I hurled such articles as ink bottles, paperweights and lumps of sealing wax toward where the woman was taking in the clothes. Of course I tried not to go too near, for I did not wish to wound. But finally, reduced to my last missile, a chunk of specimen quartz, I pitched it despairingly in direct line. Even at that distance I could hear the rattle it made upon the tin roofing a few feet from where she was standing. The woman gazed indignantly about, shook her fist in an entirely opposite direction to where I was and disappeared down the scuttle.

By this time I had become stiff and sore from retaining such an uncomfortable position as well as chilled through from the cold. I accordingly dragged myself inward and shut down the window. Somewhat grimly reflecting that I might as well make myself as comfortable as the circumstances permitted, I turned on the steam in the radiator to its fullest force. In a very little while the room was warm again, and I was able to toast my numbed feet and hands. Next I turned on the electric lights, for it was rapidly growing dark. Then I glanced at the marble topped washstand in the corner and cried exultantly:

"Come! I am not so badly off as most castaways. My dwelling, heat, light and drinking water are all provided in limitless quantity. I begin to feel hungry. I think I'll get some supper."

This last remark was merely intended as a jest, for very few business offices have larders attached, but nevertheless I proceeded to assemble the things edible if not exactly toothsome, with the following result: First of all, there was a pot nearly half full of flour paste. There was nutriment in this—of a kind. Next came two pieces of stale candy, very nearly as hard as flint. Nevertheless to me they seemed like a very possible substitute for dessert. A small bottle of moccage, presumably made from gum arabic, a large bottle containing a few doses of cod liver oil emulsion, and a vial of homeopathic sugar pellets completed the spread. But just when I had finished the assembling and was grimly debating as to which should first serve me for breaking my fast upon my mind reverted to a certain bundle in the lower drawer of my desk.

"Hurrah!" I shouted, dancing up and down with glee. "What's the matter with all those samples I got at the food show a few weeks ago? I intended to express them home. It's mighty lucky that I've been so busy and neglected it."

I quickly produced and opened the package. Out rolled the usual assemblage of miniature cans, jars and packets.

"I've got to be economical," I sagely decided, "or else before I get out of here I may have to fall back on the paste and muddle. Ugh! Let me see," examining the little packages one by one. "I think this will do. Ox tail soup. Not so bad under the circumstances. And here's a 'newfangled' cracker in this envelope. Splendid combination!"

After opening the tiny can and heating its contents as thoroughly as possible upon the radiator I made a very faint, albeit frugal, repast. When the meal was over, I drew my easel chair up conveniently to the electric lights and, taking down some legal handbooks from the dusty shelves, passed a most beneficial, even if not strictly entertaining, evening. For a bed I had the sofa, with an old overcoat thrown about me in lieu of other coverings. Although not so soft as a mattress, I slept well and awoke early on the following morning with renewed strength to battle with the problem of how to release myself from my accidental prison. Although nearly ravenous from hunger, I managed to keep myself down to a jar containing a thimbleful of cheese, three dried prunes from a dainty box and some copious drafts of water from the faucet. This was my breakfast. Just when I was ready to commence upon some of the various schemes I had formulated it suddenly occurred to me that it was Sunday. It seemed too bad to be compelled to spend another whole day and night in inactivity, but there was no help for it. I knew full well that the big office building was without its swarm of human bees upon this one day in the week. And so the dreary hours, varied only by study and my scanty repasts, dragged along. Again I slept the night through. It was now Monday. I had been a prisoner nearly 40 hours.

I wrote a number of notes explaining briefly my position and cast them out from the window, trusting that some one among them might come to the aid of a believing stranger. I yelled and shrieked and screamed until my throat gave out. I hurled everything available down and up the shaft, hoping that they might attract attention. But only once did I seem to succeed in making an impression upon the bustling thousands all about me. By carefully knotting all the pieces of string I could find together, I obtained a line twenty odd feet in length. To one end of this I attached my wooden ruler and carefully lowered it out of the window down to the full length of the line. Then I commenced swaying it gently backward and forward, so that it might beat a rat tap upon one of the lower windows. Scarcely had I well begun before there was a noise as of a sash going up below me, the cord was snatched out of my grasp and a voice bellowed:

"Quit that nonsense, you infernal young rascal, or I'll go up there and give you a warning!"

And even while I was interrupting him with frantic yells the sash closed down again, and I was left without my signaling line and apparently unheeded. Very evidently the frangible old gentleman was convinced that he had meted out summary justice to a noisy and mischievous office boy.

And so another long day drew to its close. I ate the last of my food samples that night for supper. On the morrow I would have to try the sustaining powers of the dubious office supplies. And after that, if no help came, what then? My situation had become tragic. When I look back upon it now, I can hardly imagine how I managed to keep on hoping for speedy release. It was a peculiarly galling situation to be in. Separated by only a few feet of wall space from dozens and hundreds of my fellow mortals, I was a prisoner doomed perhaps to slowly starve to death before help would come. I figured it all out a hundred times. There was the memorandum on the outside door of my office, and I had told the janitor I would not be back for a week. He would not consider it any of his business if two or even three weeks went by without seeing me. My rent was paid to the end of the month, and my credit was good with the agent. It might be the middle of February or even the beginning of March before my door would be forced open. And what would they find? Not my living body by that time, at any rate.

I did not sleep so soundly on the third night of my captivity. Perhaps it was the guiding hand of Providence that made me so wakeful. Along about 2 o'clock in the morning I raised quickly up on my elbow. I was sure I heard voices in my outer office. I could not be mistaken. Next moment my prison door opened with scarcely so much as a click and swung noiselessly back. A shaded light streamed in.

"Come on, Jack!" growled a voice. "Hain't no use. It's only a young lawyer's crib. Nothin' worth takin' here. Hurry up, so we can try the next!"

I sprang to my feet and rushed at them. Revolvers, knives or sand bags had no terrors for me in that moment. I thought only of my possible release. The sneak thieves had no time given them for consideration. They must have thought they had all unwittingly come upon a lunatic. Dropping their lantern and tools, they took to their heels and fled and may be running yet for all I know. I did not chase them but a very few feet, only to the threshold of the connecting door. With trembling fingers and a heart overflowing with thankfulness I checked back the lock on the now open door and fell rather than staggered out into the hallway. I was free.

THEY HELP THE INVENTOR.

Patent Brokers Often Prove Friends to Ingenious Mechanics.

Inventors, as everyone knows, are deficient in business sense. Left to themselves they seldom realize great profit from their work. They offer a golden opportunity to business men, who are not slow to take advantage of it. Two types of men make their living out of the inventor. One is the speculator, the other the legitimate broker of inventions. There are not so many speculators as there used to be twenty years ago. Many made fortunes out of the simple-minded inventors. The most notable case was that of one who bought ten patents from a poor fellow in Washington for $3,000 and in the next ten years cleared nearly $1,000,000 on them in this country and in Europe. Brokers have progressed steadily and are now members of a recognized calling. Many of them are thorough mechanics and good, practical scientists. Such as these are bound to be successful. Others are merely clever salesmen, who at times make money and at times have their labor for their pains. Their calling is full of odd and interesting features. They meet inventors of every type, from those who have genius to those who are cranks and dreamers. It is among the latter that they find queer inventions, some of which, though ingenious, are not patentable. One of these was a policeman's club, which at the end, was perforated so as to form a red pepper box. A small spring in the handle opened the box and enabled the wielder of the club to blind his enemy as well as to beat him. A second spring threw out as radii from the club a number of small knife blades, which would cut to pieces the hand of anyone who tried to snatch the club away. It was refused a patent by the examiners on the ground "of its cruelty and inhumanity." Another non-patentable invention was a lady's fan, in the stick of which was concealed a poisoned dagger. A second class of non-patentable inventions are those which profess to do the impossible. Of those the perpetual motion machine is most frequently met with. Some inventors devote themselves to little things. The man who made the egg beater realized a small fortune.—New York Post.

New York's Tenement Bill.

Four tenement bills have been passed by the New York legislature. They provide for a permanent bureau for the inspection and regulation of tenement-house construction and operation, for certain restrictions as to light and air supply and for safeguards against further fire. One of the bills provides that landlords shall be held responsible for disorderly tenants.

There are people who say that the benefit derived from the use of put-up medicines is imaginary. It is not the case with Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, which makes weak women strong and sick women well. A woman may imagine she's weak, or may fancy she's sick, but her imagination can't add forty pounds to her weight. The positive proof of the curative power of "Favorite Prescription" is found in the restoration of health which is recorded in face and form, of strength which can be tested, and weight which can be registered in pounds and ounces.

The general health of women is so intimately connected with the local health of the womanly organs that when these are diseased the whole body suffers loss. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription cures womanly diseases. It establishes regularity, stops weakening catarrhs, heals inflammation and ulceration and cures female weakness.

"I am very glad to let other poor sufferers know what Dr. Pierce's medicine has done for me," writes Mrs. Edwin H. Gardner, of Beechwood, Norfolk Co., Mass. (Box 70). "You know I wrote to you last summer. I read what your medicine had done for other people, so I thought I would try it, and I found it was a blessing to me and my family. I began in June and took six bottles of your medicine, and three vials of 'Pellets.' I took your medicine a year when I had a ten-pound girl. I had the easiest time I ever had with any of my three children. I have been very well since I took your medicine. I took three bottles of 'Favorite Prescription,' three of 'Golden Medical Discovery,' and three vials of 'Pellets.' I had no appetite and could not eat much without it distressing me before I took your 'Favorite Prescription,' and I only weighed 135 pounds. Now I weigh 175."

Start Girls Right!

Many beautiful girls become invalids for life, because at the crucial period of puberty they pay no attention to the laws of health. Mothers should protect their daughters' health by giving them necessary information and proper treatment. When the menses come on a girl unawares in her inexperience she is either frightened into convulsions, or scared into trying to check the flow. Many girls have checked the flow and it has never started again. And as a result they have grown pale-faced, with "crow's-feet" on their cheeks, and dark hal-moons under their eyes. A dose of taken every morning after a girl is twelve years old will bring the menses on properly and keep them regular. It will help her to develop into attractive womanhood and equip her for the duties of wife and motherhood. All druggists sell $1.00 bottles of Wine of Cardui.

The Hollywood, Asbury Park, N. J., February 2, 1900.
I read your advertisement in regard to Wine of Cardui in the Baltimore American, and it so favorably impressed me that on my visit to Baltimore during the holidays I purchased a bottle of it for my adopted daughter, who was suffering with female troubles. She had been under the doctor's care for some time, and when her periods would come on her suffering was something terrible. I induced her to try it and the first dose brought on her menses. She took it regularly according to the directions, and was greatly relieved. To use her own words, "It saved my life." J. WESLEY CROSS.

MEDALS AWARDED TO CLYDESDALES

Alexander Galbraith Has Four of the Handsome Medals Ever Seen in This City.

Alexander Galbraith, secretary of the American Clydesdale Association, has secured four of the handsomest medals ever awarded for Clydesdale stock. They are the medals awarded at the International Live Stock exhibition at Chicago last December and to Mr. Galbraith was intrusted their purchase.

The medals were secured of Hall, Sayles & Fifield and are beauties. They are of solid gold, about two inches in diameter and very heavy. Their chief beauty is in the rich simplicity of design and the exquisite workmanship, each medal having been made by hand. They are alike in design, perfectly plain with a raised rim, the inside of which is wrought out in a dainty pattern which enhances the plain gold.

The face of the medal bears in the center a Clydesdale's head in bas relief, worked out by hand. Above and below it is the lettering "American Clydesdale Association International Live Stock Exhibition Chicago December 1900." The reverse side bears the record of the award, one of them being "Awarded to Peter Walker & Sons, Liverpool, England, for Sensation, 12 Years Old, as the Best Clydesdale Mare or Gelding." A second medal goes to N. P. Clarke, of St. Cloud, Minn., for the best group of five Clydesdales of any age or sex. The owner of the other two medals is George Moore of Waterloo, Ont., one being awarded for the best team of four Clydesdales shown to wagon and the other for the best pair of Clydesdales shown to wagon.

The same form of wording is followed on all the medals, the lettering being in royal purple which makes a most effective combination with the gold. Each medal rests in a case of royal purple velvet and the fortunate owners may well be pleased with them for what they represent, for their artistic beauty and for their intrinsic value, which is large.

Imitators have been many. Thoughtful people have learned that true merit comes only with the genuine Rocky Mountain Tea made by Madison Medicine Co. 35c. Smith's pharmacy, kodak agents, next to postoffice.

Stricken With Typhoid Fever.

Miss Florence Hart Miner, of Chicago, formerly of this city, has been stricken with typhoid fever, and is now in a hospital in that city. The sickness was brought on by over work. Miss Miner had a number of commissions for the Pan-American Exposition, some of which had been completed and the anxiety to get the rest ready brought on the illness. Miss Miner has achieved considerable fame since she has been in Chicago in her line of work and her many friends in this city will be pained to hear of her illness.

Jennie—To have a beautiful neck wiggle your head from side to side every night take Rocky Mountain Tea. It's a short cut to a graceful form. 35c. Smith's pharmacy, kodak agents, next to postoffice.

Maple City soap is not only one of the good soaps but is one of the best soaps made.

Epworth League Social.

The Junior Epworth League of Court Street M. E. church gave a very pleasant social in the church parlors last evening, which was quite largely attended. It was an enjoyable occasion, and while the program was not lengthy, every number was given in a manner to please the audience.

Little Miss Kildow gave a pleasing recitation, and Miss Fannie O. Rumrill recited "The Story of Patey" very prettily. Hazel Bump sang a solo sweetly, and Miss Maude Young and George Robinson contributed to the pleasure of the audience with well rendered vocal solos. Miss Leona B. Stevens played the piano accompaniments for Miss Young and Mr. Robinson, and Miss Tassie Nott accompanied Miss Bump.

During the serving of the light refreshments which preceded the program, Miss Tassie Nott played several selections on the piano.

Robber in Wolves' Cage.

For sheer melodrama the English jewel robber Houghton's arrest would be hard to beat. After his last big diamond theft, which occurred a few days ago, he was traced to West Bromwich, and thence led the detectives a dance over the country. At last, when the pursuers were hard on his heels, he dashed into a traveling menagerie, which was exhibiting just outside Birmingham. There he found one of the attendants fastening up a van cage containing a pair of large gray wolves. He flung the man on one side and opened the cage, shutting himself up with the beasts and daring any one to fetch him out. The strange thing was that the wolves, which the proprietor had always considered the most dangerous animals in the show, took no notice whatever of the fugitive, but showed great ill temper toward the keeper and a constable, who had great difficulty in dragging Houghton out.—Chicago Journal.

THE TURN OF LIFE.

The Most Important Period in a Woman's Existence.—Mrs. Johnson Tells How She Was Helped Over the Trying Time.

CHARLOTTE JOHNSON.

Owing to modern methods of living, not one woman in a thousand approaches this perfectly natural change without experiencing a train of very annoying, and sometimes painful symptoms.

Those dreadful hot flashes, sending the blood surging to the heart until it seems ready to burst, and the faint feeling that follows, sometimes with chills, as if the heart were going to stop for good, are only a few of the symptoms of a dangerous nervous trouble. The nerves are crying out for assistance. The cry should be heeded in time. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was prepared to meet the needs of woman's system at this trying period of her life. The three following letters are guaranteed to be genuine and true, and still further prove what a great medicine Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is for women.

Mar. 12, 1897.
"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I have been sick for a long time. I was taken sick with flooding. All my trouble seemed to be in the womb. I ache all the time at the lower part of the womb. The doctor says the womb is covered with ulcers. I suffer with a pain on the left side of my back over the kidney. I am fifty years old and passing through the change of life. Please advise me what to do to get relief. Would like to hear from you as soon as possible."—MRS. CHARLOTTE JOHNSON, Monclova, Ohio.

Jan. 23, 1898.
"I have been taking your remedies, and think they have helped me a great deal. I had been in bed for ten weeks when I began taking your Vegetable Compound, but after using it for a short time I was able to be up around the house. The aching in the lower part of womb has left me. The most that troubles me now is the flowing. That is not so bad, but still there is a little every day. I am not discouraged yet, and shall continue with your medicine, for I believe it will cure me."—MRS. CHARLOTTE JOHNSON, Monclova, Ohio.

April 13, 1900.
"I send you this letter to publish for the benefit of others. I was sick for about nine years so that I could not do my work. For three months I could not sit up long enough to have my bed made. I had five different doctors, and all said there was no help for me. My trouble was change of life. I suffered with ulceration of the womb, pain in sides, kidney and stomach trouble, backache, headache, and dizziness. I am well and strong, and feel like a new person. My recovery is a perfect surprise to everybody that knew me. I owe all to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I would not do without your medicine for anything. There is no need of women suffering so much if they would take your remedies, for they are a sure cure."—MRS. CHARLOTTE JOHNSON, Monclova, Ohio.

When one stops to think about the good Mrs. Johnson derived from Mrs. Pinkham's advice and medicine, it seems almost beyond belief; yet it is all true as stated in her three letters published above at her own request.

As a matter of positive fact Mrs. Pinkham has on file thousands of letters from women who have been safely carried through that danger period "Change of Life." Mrs. Johnson's cure is not an unusual one for Mrs. Pinkham's medicine to accomplish.

CIVILIZING CHINA.

EUROPE'S WAY OF TEACHING THE CELESTIALS HOW TO PROGRESS.

Barbarities on the Route From Taku to Peking—Stories of Eyewitnesses. A Species of Refined Torture—Americans Acted Nobly.

[Copyright, 1901, by G. L. Kilmer.]

EUROPE tried to "civilize" America and was kicked out pretty completely long ago. By fits and starts in the course of the last half century she has tried her hand on China. During the past year there has been the most acute of all reformatory spasms on foot, and, really, the only show of civilized conduct to be credited to the western powers invading China is the raw American product.

In contemplating the European orgy of rapine and murder one can but recall the fearful indictment Robert Buchanan made in 1870, when Germany had France in the dust:

Can all your pedants, all your schools, Teach ye no newer, better rules Than thus to answer wrong with wrong, And blindly to perpetuate The bitter legacy of hate?

Asia has never yearned for European civilization because she says that her own is the superior. It makes for mental and spiritual development, while that of Europe is material, gross and selfish. What truth there is in this last indictment may be shown in the final argument on the lips of every apologist for the horrors of the foreign occupation when driven to the wall. "What right," says he, "have the Chinese to shut out foreign goods and machinery?" Thus it's all a question of the almighty dollar, as the Asiatic moralist declares. If only the stories were the nightmares of yellow journalists! But, alas, they are true! A British subject in an article bearing the suggestive title, "The Chinese Wolf and the European Lamb," describes in The Contemporary Review his experiences of two or three weeks following the army of civilization from Tientsin to Peking. The day after leaving Tientsin he was towed by untiring coolies through a land thickly strewn over with what had once been human dwellings, but were become heaps of rubbish. "A wave of death," says the writer, Mr. E. L. Dillon, "had swept over the land, washing away the vestiges of Chinese culture. Men, women, boys, girls and babes in arms had been shot, stabbed and hurled to bits in this labyrinth of streets, and now on the banks of the river reigned the peace described by Tacitus. Fire and sword had put their marks upon this entire country. The untrampled corn was rotting in the fields, the pastures were herdless, roodless the ruins of houses, the hamlets devoid of inhabitants."

In the main the details given in Mr. Dillon's article are too terrible to print. They describe the most cruel and inhuman acts the mind can conceive human creatures inflicting upon the helpless of their kind. One must turn to the atrocities of the Duke of Alva in the Spanish Netherlands for a parallel.

"Not only on the banks of the Peking, but also in large cities," says this writer, "I have witnessed the manner in which abandoned houses containing portable property were sacked. As a rule, none of the inmates were at home excepting the dead, who were often numerous. The few valuables which had been theirs were swiftly sifted, appraised, rolled up in bundles and tollsomenly carried off. Very often the remainder was deliberately spoiled, as guns are spiked perhaps lest the enemy should profit by them, and sometimes the house itself was set on fire. I was present on several occasions when this method of punishing the Chinese was resorted to. Once when we quitted a village we left a conflagration of Tophet behind us. 'To keep the Boxers from assembling' was the official reason given, and I ought to say that I had no grounds for doubting in this case that this was the real though perhaps mistaken motive."

The coarser forms of brutality were not the sum total of the tortures visited upon the helpless Chinese by their civilized conquerors. On the slightest excuse or upon none at all the Europeans, always "soldiers of civilization," applied the goad. Boats towing supplies to the troops already up the river were drawn by coolies when coolies could be had, but after the wanton and wholly causeless massacre of 300 coolies at Taku at the time of the attack there these poor creatures held aloof from the European camps. "Then," says Mr. Dillon, "the Europeans went out into the byways and highways and drove before them every able and frail bodied man they met, forcing them to serve as coolies and perform the most exhausting, protracted and dangerous open air work that can well be imagined. The boats were mostly heavily freighted; the stream abounds in shallows, zigzags and strong currents; the banks are so high that the human draft horses have sometimes to trudge in the mud up to their waists or to walk for hours in pestiferous water."

"Fancy the feelings of an English barrister, city man, officer or official if he were suddenly surrounded by a gang of armed Chinamen and obliged to choose between work of this kind and instant death. That was what sometimes happened to the Chinese. The work was all the more arduous that there were not enough coolies to each boat, so that a few men had to perform the work of many. One very heavy barge was drawn by five, two of whom ought to have been at school and one in an asylum for the old and infirm. The ages of those pressed into service varied from 7 to 70. Tugging manfully away at one boat I noticed a gang of four, of whom one was a boy of 12, his face horribly twisted by nature and wrenched by disease, while another was a shrunken, shriveled up old man. Distasteful to them as was the service into which they had been driven, the coolies exerted themselves as no other men in Europe or the world would or could, and seldom did they need the stroke of the stick or the bough, which was the soldiers' way of reminding them of the necessity of haste.

"The higher the boats moved up the river the harder the work of towing. They were kept at it from 2:30 a. m. until 12:30 a. m., with one hour's official rest during the 22 hours. Then they got two hours' sleep and were up again and working. Their woes were countless. They were continually in danger of drowning, for many could not swim a stroke. They were ever getting cut or hurt. If disabled, they were left stranded in a swamp or a heap of ruins, where they were put to death by the Boxers for the help they had given the invader."

Dillon's story does not stand alone. Germans have boasted of their brutalities, and American correspondents have exposed the general reign of lust and loot, blood and booty. Says a German marine whose letter was printed in the Krefelder Zeitung: "The work we have to do here is done by the Chinese. If any one has work to do, he seizes on a couple of Chinamen in the street, who are hauled off to perform it. We merely stand by with loaded rifles and superintend the job. When the work is done, the Chinese are set free. According to circumstances they get a fair number of blows besides." This marine in the same letter boasts of having helped shoot down 78 Chinese in Peking for "plundering in the German quarters or otherwise transgressing the law." In one case eight Chinamen were shot down for being "suspected of the intention to set fire to certain buildings. Another German whose letter appeared in the Frankfurter Zeitung wrote: "Whenever we go out we never fail to take a loaded rifle with us. Every night a number (of Chinese) who intend to steal or attack get killed. We lead a genuine highwayman's life here. We commandeer whatever we desire to have. We are compelled to shoot every Chinaman who shows himself at night, and, unfortunately, this takes place very often."

The New York Sun's Peking correspondent gave that paper an account of the daily auction of loot which takes place in front of the residence of the British minister, the auctioneer and all the helpers being British officers in uniform. This is merely a scheme to legalize the loot, the purchaser getting a title and the men of the command sharing the proceeds of the sale.

The special correspondent of the Pittsburg Press with the American army in Peking, Paul S. Hunter, says: "Not one-fourth of the horrors of the war in China have been told. Deeds committed by some of the French, Russian and Hindoo troops are too terrible for words."

"There is no crime that has not been committed by soldiers of the allied armies. They have killed gray haired men and women, stabbed infants in their mothers' arms and thrust bayonets through the throats of beggars asking alms. No man or child was safe on the streets. Hell had burst its bounds, and demons trod the earth. They turned their rifles on the fleeing masses and mowed them down like sheep. Never in the history of Christendom have such crimes been committed. Why, the unspeakable Turk, reeking in Armenian blood, was an amateur in crime compared to the French and Russian troops. And then they tell us that they do all of this for the advancement of civilization."

Mr. Hunter leaves out the Germans, although they are guilty on their own admissions; also the English, who began to civilize China 50 years ago by forcing opium on them and who carried on the "good work" in India by blowing natives from the cannon's mouth. One day the shameful story will all be told, and American soldiers will be exempted from the class of murdering, looting foreigners. Europe takes to herself the glory of "civilizing" China and must also bear the burden of the infamy of her crusade.

EXPERIMENTS WITH TISSUE.

Electrical Reaction Proves Theory of a Scientific Doctor.

Dr. Augustus Waller has recently made some interesting experiments which have attracted considerable attention. His endeavor has been to discover a method of demonstrating whether an animal tissue is dead or living, and as a result he has found that by sending a current through such tissue and then connecting it to the poles of a sensitive galvanometer that there will be a back rush of current perceived if the tissue is living, while if not there will be no appreciable effect. Quite lately the doctor has been conducting on this principle a series of experiments on eggs with the object of ascertaining the first appearance of life. In general he found that non-incubated, sterile or putrefied eggs failed to give the back rush current, while those containing an embryo in state of development always gave it. With incubated eggs he first removed a small portion of the shell from the upper and lower sides, holding the eggs horizontally, so that the shell should not interfere with the passage of the current, applying the electrodes to the membrane thus laid bare. At the beginning of incubation he found the eggs gave no back rush of current. After twenty-four hours a small back rush was noticeable, and upon opening the egg was found to be but little developed. After forty-eight hours, currents in the positive and negative direction were noticeable of plus 0.0010 to 0.0022 volt and—0.0006 to 0.0012 volt. Upon opening, the vascular area was found to be well developed and the heart beat vigorous. He continued his experiments up to twelve days, finding the back rush to constantly increase, with the increase of life in the embryo. In two instances, however, the results were negative, but in one of these the egg was found to be sterile and in the other putrid; both, consequently, sustained the proposition. In a number of similar experiments he obtained like results, and also with eggs in a mass like frogs' eggs. One of his most striking experiments was with certain animalcules, which when dried appear to possess no signs of life, but which when exposed to moisture revive. In them the results followed the same order, being negative during the quiescent stage and showing a back rush when vital activity appeared. Tissues rendered insensible by anaesthetics responded in the same way, giving no reaction until the effect of the anaesthetic was removed, when they gave the characteristic electrical reaction.—Philadelphia Times.

Berlin Has No Submerged Tenth.

The peculiar features of the wealth and prosperity of Berlin lie in the broad subdivision of small incomes, upon which people manage to live respectably, in the comparative simplicity of life, the cheapness of amusements and education, and, above all, in the remarkable absence of the "submerged element." The small amount of human waste with which this living factory gets through its work is its most remarkable characteristic.—Harper's Magazine.
